Ode to the Mother

At the shore of the Mother we come in peace
to give thanks
and pray for blessings.
It is what she asks of us.
Though life be in turmoil, the light bill waits to be paid and dollars are gone, we still take time to pause, remember our roots,
family and community.
We greet with sincere embraces, left shoulders touching,
then right shoulders,
looking deep into each others eyes.
We bring our simple offerings of honeydew and lilies, hoping our gifts are good enough and that we are good enough to make her proud of her children and forgive our mischief.
Will she accept these gifts?

She sees our tears and says,
"Why are you crying?
You have nothing to be sad about."
And we realize how this whining has become a way of life, a choice born of greed or some other unnecessary sin.

Instead, we sing to her in our loud voice, celebrate her presence in us with each other,
dance around her in circles mixing wind and water.

She is our Great Mother, Mother of life,
Mother of the waters,
of ships at sea,
Caribbean islands,
the Moon in her fullness, the explosion of tides against steep cliffs.

We are born from her womb that spills life into clay form and teaches our hearts to drum, to sing and dance together.

We come to her shore in peace
to give thanks.
It is what she asks of us.

©2011 Sandra María Esteves